On looking at the virtues he chooses, one sees the essence of his writing. Some of them are: truthfulness, patience, justice, reverence, asceticism, courage, kindness, courtesy, silence, justice before God - they are the virtues of the interior man, the virtues drawn out of contemplation and knowledge of the true nature of the human being.

The virtues Guardini covers are not the usual ones (faith, hope, charity) but include things like courtesy, orderliness, and gratitude. As he so often does, Guardini comes at things from different viewpoints than you'd expect and that helps us see how these virtues matter in ways we wouldn't have thought of otherwise.
