Love Fever. Part 1. This particular day, Diana left work early and decided to pass by her sister 's place. It had been a while since they sat, comfort, and bond as sisters do. She knocked on the door, but no one opened, she knocked again, and Danny, her sister 's, husband opened. He wore a baggy floral short and a tight white vest.

Bottom-barrel O'Jays, Love Fever suffers mightily from serious over-production (i.e., syrupy-sweet synthesizers and programmed drums) and weak material. Blame producer Reggie Griffin for much of this debacle, although even Philly soul kingpins Kenny Gamble and Leon Huff are culpable via the patriotic treacle of "I Love America." Combined with the simplistic famine protest tune "All Eyes on Africa," it's difficult to believe this is the same group responsible for some of the most thoughtful ...
